Story of Suicide Pact Told on the Witness Stand

IN A TRIAL FOR MURDER

Young Man Says Girl Shot Him But Wound Was Not Fatal

And Then Turned the Pistol on Herself Inflicting Death Wound.

Liberty, Mo., Nov. 7.—By tonight Jessie B. Webb will know whether the jury listened to his story of a love-inspired suicide pact believed him. It was one of the strongest recitals ever given on a witness stand, and realizing this, Webb awaits in fear.

Instructions were given to the jury this morning. Closing arguments followed. Those who have watched the case feel confident there will be a verdict before nightfall.

Webb and Inez Walkup were nurses at the hospital for the insane at St. Joseph, Mo. They told their friends they had been married secretly, and visited Webb's sister in Plattburg, Mo., as man and wife. There, according to Webb's strange story, the girl revealed to him her condition, and declared they must both end their lives to atone for her sin, for their only marriage, he said, had been an agreement of mutual love, never solemnized by civil ceremony.

He agreed with her. The girl finally went with him to Smithville, Mo. There she bought morphine and they each took the poison. Then the girl bought strychnine, but the doctor who sold it, suspecting her purpose, mixed it with other drugs so that its power to kill was taken away and again they failed.

Then he bought a revolver and they agreed that one must shoot the other, then take his own life. Webb said he weakened and sent word to James M. Reed, a merchant at Trimble, Mo., to come and take him to his brother's home, but that when Reed arrived the girl threw herself in their path and declared if Webb left she would follow and kill him. Reed corroborated this testimony. So Reed left the room alone.

"Then we agreed that this night must be our last," testified Webb. "I put the pistol under my pillow, and we went to sleep with that understanding. Next morning about dawn, I was awakened by something pressing against my chest. It was the pistol. Miss Walkup leaned over me and said, 'Good bye, here is where we both die.' Then she pulled the trigger and I knew no more until I came to, to find people crowded in the room. They had been attracted by two shots. One of the shots killed Miss Walkup. I was only wounded."

Mayor-Elect Atherton Makes Formal Statement

To the Citizens of Newark:

The result of the election in Newark Tuesday, was, of course, most gratifying to me, and I take it not as a personal triumph as much as a full and free expression of the people of the city on the questions at issue during the campaign. The overwhelming majority given at the polls is self-evident of the fact that the principles in my platform, announced some weeks ago, have the sanction of the people, irrespective of business calling or section of residence.

I intend to stand by that platform, and to the best of my ability enforce all the laws with a common sense, reasonable regard to the rights of every citizen. The campaign waged against me by those who would have it appear that I would stand for a "wide open town," did not mislead those who know that such is not the case. This issue was made and the people voted their confidence in my statement that I would allow no such thing, as well as their belief that reason and justice should be the governing influences that should dominate the Mayor of this town, with a view of giving all a "square deal."

In reference to saloons, I will insist upon a strict observance of the midnight closing ordinance and the conducting of every "such place in an orderly manner and strictly in observance of law.

Every power at my command will be used to suppress gambling of every sort and description, including card games, slot machines, and every game of chance. Every saloon keeper who allows minors in his place will be severely dealt with.

There will be no opposition on my part to Sunday baseball conducted as it was last season.

Towards my friends and supporters I feel the kindest sentiments of gratitude for their confidence and respect, as shown at the polls, while toward those who honestly opposed me and cast their ballots accordingly, I feel no ill will, but feel that if they will now just as honestly co-operate with me, it will go a long way toward giving Newark one of the best administrations in the city's history, which will be my aim and toward which I will give my earnest effort.

HERBERT ATHERTON.

SUNDAY BASEBALL PLATFORM A WINNER

Findlay, Nov. 7.—Running on a platform that provided for a liberal enforcement of the law only regarding Sunday baseball, which he held to be the right of the workingman, Mayor James B. Walker, Democrat, carried almost the entire ticket with him at Tuesday's election. Walker's plurality was 615 over Thomas F. Gillespie, an old soldier, and the candidate of the Republican party.

W. R. HEARST IN LIBEL SUIT

New York, Nov. 7.—William R. Hearst appeared before Justice Wyatt in the court of special sessions Wednesday for a hearing on the charge of criminal libel brought against him by former Congressman William Astor Chandler. Mr. Chandler alleges the libel was contained in a recent article appearing in the New York Evening Journal concerning the case of Raymond Hitchcock in which Mr. Chandler's name was mentioned. The complainant was on the witness stand and denied that he had ever been at Hitchcock's house when young girls were there. He also denied that he had ever ridden in Hitchcock's automobile at any time.

In this connection it was testified by an employee of the Evening Journal that Mr. Hearst never wrote for that paper, and that his only interest in it was in a financial way. Justice Wyatt gave the opposing counsel until next Monday to file briefs.

The agreement provides for the consideration of further matters in dispute, primarily by a sectional board of conciliation representing the various grades of employees and the individual railroads.

The police believe that the double murder was the work of a Black Hand gang. They base their conclusion upon information to the effect that Russano, who formerly had a grocery store at No. 340 East 107th street, Manhattan, had been driven from New York with his wife by some mysterious agency about a month ago.

Owing to the remoteness of the scene of the accident it is difficult to get details of the affair, but it is learned that several of those who were wounded will die. Naval men are authority for the statement that most of the killed and injured were in the engineering and stoking department. The Blucher is the German torpedo schoolship. She was built at Kiel in 1877 and usually has on board about 200 officers and men. Her armament consists of a number of old 5.9-inch guns.

Columbus, Nov. 7.—With his mind shattered by the stress of combat with the Standard Oil company, Geo. Hamilton Phelps, a prominent Findlay lawyer, created a scene in the Supreme court Thursday. Following this he called at the executive department and insisted that his hat belonged to Governor Harris, tossed the headpiece on the desk and left the capitol building bareheaded.

Phelps was associated with Prosecuting Attorney David and the attorney general's department in the litigation against the Standard Oil Trust. Phelps was arguing an oil lease case when his law partner, Prosecutor David and Assistant Attorney General Miller entered the court room. Phelps rushed to David and Miller, embraced them, invoked the blessings of God upon them and then made for the bench. He grasped Justice Davis by the hand. Miller and David succeeded in getting Phelps from the court room. Upon his return to Findlay, the Probate court will be asked to take charge of Phelps.

MILE A MINUTE BOAT.

Vertebrate Propeller Likely to Make It a Reality, Say Experts.

That the mile a minute boat may soon be a reality was the opinion expressed recently by a party of experts, including naval engineers and yachtsmen, who had a private view and saw a practical demonstration of Joseph Turner's invention, the vertebrate propeller, at 75 Fulton street, New York.

Set in motion by belt gear and driven by four piston rods which pass through the stuffing boxes in the bottom of the boat and are connected to its hinges, the triple horizontal plates which form the propeller worked up and down with the sinuous action of a fish, says the New York Herald. The device is so unlike anything presented before for propelling a vessel and its merits seemed so apparent that the spectators predicted the propeller and its inventor would speedily become subjects for serious consideration by all interested in marine or aerial propulsion, for Mr. Turner intends to apply his system to aerial navigation.

Captain Reynolds T. Hall, U. S. N., chief of the steam engineering department at the Brooklyn navy yard, who was one of the spectators, said of the propeller afterward:

"It looks well and it works well and is an invention that it seems to me well warrants a trial in the water. It has a lifting as well as a propelling motion, and it has this advantage over the screw propeller that the surface on both sides of each blade, or plate, is efficient for propulsion, while in the screw propeller only the front surface is efficient."

Commander Emil Theiss of the same department at the navy yard said:

"This is certainly an interesting invention, and it looks promising. The principle is a good one, and it may revolutionize all theories of propulsion."

DUSTING OFF THE ARMY.

O'Malley Tells How the Great Trial Rode For Officers Organized.

The origin of the idea which prompted the famous trial ride of the United States army round about Fort Myer, Va., the reverberations of which have not yet died away, is traced in an article in Harper's Weekly by Frank Ward O'Malley. The test ride was not, it appears, by any means an original idea of the president's. It was young "Professor" Mike Sweeney, whose job it is to box alternate rounds with a certain party in the White House each day, who suggested the brilliant scheme. It seems that Mike and this certain party were having a bit of a brush with the mits one evening while waiting for the roast to be served when Mike observed as follows:

"And I am walkin' past the Army and Navy club early this afternoon, and I am pipin' off a pink gilled army gent sittin' face to face with a brandy and soda at a window. Now, this person is sure the fattest, widest, beefiest, biggest party ever I see on the continent of North America. An' sittin' with him is another one twice as big. An' loomin' above that one was—"

The certain party frowned thoughtfully. "I'm for those two or three to lead off with," he murmured presently, as if he were thinking aloud. "I'll show this rocking chair platoon that it'll have to be able to canter as well as canter."

Thus was a brilliant scheme matured.

Real Thanksgiving Dinner in London.

Half a dozen American members of the Five o'Clock club in London have arranged for an elaborate Thanksgiving dinner which will all be sent over from the United States, says a special cable dispatch from London to the New York Herald. Mr. Randolph Mordecai, whose home is in Baltimore and at whose London house the dinner is to be given, will have terrapin and Lynn Haven bay oysters sent over. Judge Glaiser of Boston will supply mince pies made at the Parker House, and Marcus Mayer has written to a friend in Rhode Island for the biggest chestnut fed turkey he can find. So it goes all through the whole menu. Everything is to be distinctly American, including the drinks, from California sherry to rum for the punch. The eagle will surely scream in London on Thanksgiving day.

Corn Husking Trust.

The example set in other sections of Iowa has been followed in Blackhawk county, where the farmer boys have formed a corn husking trust, and 3 cents a bushel will be paid this year by all owners in order to get their crops gathered unless outside help is imported, says a Fort Dodge (Ia.) correspondent of the St. Paul Pioneer Press. Meetings have been held at country schoolhouses, and the young farmers are well organized. The movement is general through the county. Fully 200 members have pledged themselves not to husk a bushel for less than 3 cents. Heretofore 2 to 2 1/2 cents has been the prevailing price. They hold that it is impossible to make a good wage at the old rate and back their statements regarding the raise in price with the laconic answer, "Well, it's worth it."

Gigantic Clock.

It is proposed to convert the Eiffel tower into a gigantic timepiece, and with that object experiments are now being made, says the New York Tribune. A huge electric sign has been placed on the second platform on the side looking toward Paris. At night this illuminated sign shows the time in gigantic figures, which change every minute. It found practicable these figures will be placed on the top of the tower, so as to be seen from all sides for many miles.

NEW ALASKAN TRIBE.

High Type of Red Men Discovered by Archaeologist.

CRIME IS UNKNOWN TO THEM

Strange People of the North Who Dress in Feathers Found by Dr. George B. Gordon of University of Pennsylvania. Patriarchal Priests Govern Them.

A new tribe of aborigines hitherto unknown to science is reported by Dr. George B. Gordon, curator of the department of American Archaeology of the University of Pennsylvania, who recently returned to Philadelphia after a dive into the Alaskan wilderness, says the New York Evening Sun.

The tribe was discovered 800 miles from the mouth of the Kuskokwim river, and Dr. Gordon has named them "Kuskwagumutes." Instead of wearing furs the people dress in the skins of birds, making clothing from the breast feathers of loons. The explorer brought home a collection of their clothing and utensils.

When the collection arrives at Philadelphia he and other ethnologists will try to determine whether the tribe came from Asia or whether it migrated from Lower California. Dr. Gordon believes the race has been gradually driven by Athabaskan Indians and Eskimos to its present quarters, which is a natural fortress. They represent perhaps the most ancient dwellers of Alaska, who made their way there from Asia. They are monogamists, and no such thing as vice is known among them. They are permitted by their priests to have more than one wife, but never do so. The men are tall and strong physically and the women graceful and good looking. Dr. Gordon says there are only 400 of them left.

The members of the tribe show a higher mentality and development than any of the known inhabitants of the far north. They alone of all the tribes north of Mexico and southern California possess the art of pottery making and are believed to be the last of the undiscovered races on this continent to be brought to light. Dr. Gordon heard of them when he was in Alaska in 1905 and determined to find them, although it necessitated his penetrating an unknown Alaskan wilderness.

Dr. Gordon lived for several months with these strange people of the Kuskokwim to study their language, religion and habits. He found them remarkably free from crime and with no set laws, being governed by priests who are patriarchs. The exploring expedition was fitted out by Mrs. Charles C. Harrison of Philadelphia and set out last spring.

As a companion for the journey he engaged a guide. They took steamer as far as Fairbanks, the largest mining camp in the Alaskan interior. At Fairbanks they built a canoe and made their way in it to the mouth of the Kantishna river, a hitherto uncharted and unnamed river emptying into the Tanana fifty miles below Fairbanks.

Although this river is as large as the Delaware at Philadelphia the geography of the northwest is on so tremendous a scale, says Dr. Gordon, that hitherto it has been ignored as an insignificant creek. Dr. Gordon resolved to go up it as far as possible and trust fortune as to his finding a portage from its head to the Kuskokwim.

He camped one night near the mouth of this stream in an Indian village. One of the young men declared that he had crossed the divide between the two streams and volunteered to make a map of the portage for the doctor's guidance. Accordingly the youth drew on black bark a map of a route up the Kantishna to its source, the hitherto unknown lake, Mintuana, within fifty miles of Mount McKinley, the tallest peak in North America, and across by an easy portage of ten miles to the Kuskokwim, whose course he outlined for a considerable distance both ways.

The canoe was forced up the river, which ran so swiftly that it was necessary constantly to resort to the tump like—a line attached to the forehead of one of the travelers, who walks in the stream and pulls the canoe while the other steers. After 250 miles of this heart-breaking work Dr. Gordon came to Lake Mintuana, nestling at the foot of Mount McKinley. It took him six days to traverse the ten miles. Once across, for two solid months the party paddled down the Kuskokwim, making geographical and ethnographic researches as they went.

On his return journey from the mouth of the Kuskokwim river to Nome, a distance of over 100 miles, Dr. Gordon nearly died of starvation and thirst. He was compelled to hazard the stormy trip in a twenty foot trading skiff. On the first day out a storm arose, and the skiff was driven across Bering sea to the Siberian coast. For twenty days the doctor and his companions were buffeted by the sea in the neighborhood of Bering strait. On short rations from the first, after the first five days there was nothing to eat but hardback biscuit. Near the end of the voyage water gave out, and only the sighting of Siberia, where the water tank was filled from a stream, saved the party from the horrors of thirst. At the time of the landing in Siberia the provisions ran out altogether, and as the coast was absolutely barren of life the party was compelled to put to sea again and face the return journey to America absolutely without provisions. Fortunately a fresh easterly breeze took them to Nome in three days, during which they had nothing to eat.

SIGNOR TOSELLI'S STORY OF THE COURTSHIP.

SIGNORA TOSELLI AND HER LITTLE DAUGHTER PRINCESS MONICA FROM THE EUROPEAN EDITION OF THE NEW YORK HERALD

Florence, Italy, Nov. 7.—Signor Toselli, husband of Countess Montignoso, formerly the Crown Princess of Savoy, has given some interesting information as to his meeting with his wife and the manner in which their marriage in London was arranged.

Hardly had Signor Toselli and the countess come to be acquainted before a friendship, which rapidly became a closer nature, sprang up between them, and they were not long in deciding their future marriage.

In July, after surmounting many obstacles, the couple left Florence quietly in an automobile one day, took the train at a small station, and traveling via Turin and Paris, they succeeded in reaching London without being recognized.

Long legal discussion followed and eventually the marriage was duly performed and later confirmed at the Italian consulate. The newly married couple left London immediately afterward.

MILE A MINUTE BOAT.

Vertebrate Propeller Likely to Make it a Reality, Say Experts.

That the mile a minute boat may soon be a reality was the opinion expressed recently by a party of experts, including naval engineers and yachtsmen, who had a private view and saw a practical demonstration of Joseph Turner's invention, the vertebrate propeller, at 75 Fulton street, New York.

Set in motion by belt gear and driven by four piston rods which pass through the stuffing boxes in the bottom of the boat and are connected to its hinges, the triple horizontal plates which form the propeller worked up and down with the sinuous action of a fish, says the New York Herald. The device is so unlike anything presented before for propelling a vessel and its merits seemed so apparent that the spectators predicted the propeller and its inventor would speedily become subjects for serious consideration by all interested in marine or aerial propulsion, for Mr. Turner intends to apply his system to aerial navigation.

Captain Reynolds T. Hall, U. S. N., chief of the steam engineering department at the Brooklyn navy yard, who was one of the spectators, said of the propeller afterward:

"It looks well and it works well and is an invention that it seems to me well warrants a trial in the water. It has a lifting as well as a propelling motion, and it has this advantage over the screw propeller that the surface on both sides of each blade, or plate, is efficient for propulsion, while in the screw propeller only the front surface is efficient."

Commander Emil Theiss of the same department at the navy yard said: "This is certainly an interesting invention, and it looks promising. The principle is a good one, and it may revolutionize all theories of propulsion."

DUSTING OFF THE ARMY.

O'Malley Tells How the Great Trial Ride For Officers Originated.

The origin of the idea which prompted the famous trial ride of the United States army round about Fort Myer, Va., the reverberations of which have not yet died away, is traced in an article in Harper's Weekly by Frank Ward O'Malley. The test ride was not, it appears, by any means an original idea of the president's. It was young "Professor" Mike Sweeney, whose job it is to box alternate rounds with a certain party in the White House each day, who suggested the brilliant scheme. It seems that Mike and this certain party were having a bit of a brush with the mits one evening while waiting for the roast to be served when Mike observed as follows:

"And I am walkin' past the Army and Navy club early this afternoon, and I am pipin' off a pink gilled army gent sittin' face to face with a brandy and soda at a window. Now, this person is sure the fattest, widest, beefiest, biggest party ever I see on the continent of North America. An' sittin' with him is another one twice as big. An' loomin' above that one was—"

"The certain party frowned thoughtfully. 'I'm for those two or three to lead off with,' he murmured presently, as if he were thinking aloud. 'I'll show this rocking chair platoon that it'll have to be able to canter as well as decanter.'"

Thus was a brilliant scheme matured.

Real Thanksgiving Dinner in London.

Half a dozen American members of the Five o'clock club in London have arranged for an elaborate Thanksgiving dinner which will all be sent over from the United States, says a special cable dispatch from London to the New York Herald. Mr. Randolph Morehead, whose home is in Baltimore and at whose London house the dinner is to be given, will have terrapin and Lynn Haven bay oysters sent over. Judge Glaiser of Boston will supply mince pies made at the Parker House, and Marcus Mayer has written to a friend in Rhode Island for the biggest chestnut fed turkey he can find. So it goes all through the whole menu. Everything is to be distinctly American, including the drinks, from California sherry to rum for the punch. The eagle will surely stream in London on Thanksgiving day.

Corn Husking Trust.

The example set in other sections of Iowa has been followed in Blackhawk county, where the farmer boys have formed a corn husking trust, and 3 cents a bushel will be paid this year by all owners in order to get their crops gathered unless outside help is imported, says a Fort Dodge (Ia.) correspondent of the St. Paul Pioneer Press. Meetings have been held at country schoolhouses, and the young farmers are well organized. The movement is general through the county. Fully 200 members have pledged themselves not to husk a bushel for less than 3 cents. Heretofore 2 to 2 1/2 cents has been the prevailing price. They hold that it is impossible to make a good wage at the old rate and back their statements regarding the raise in price with the laconic answer, "Well, it's worth it."

Gigantic Clock.

It is proposed to convert the Eiffel tower into a gigantic timepiece, and with that object experiments are now being made, says the New York Tribune. A huge electric sign has been placed on the second platform on the side looking toward Paris. At night this illuminated sign shows the time in gigantic figures, which change every minute. It found practicable these figures will be placed on the top of the tower, so as to be seen from all sides for many miles.

NEW ALASKAN TRIBE.

High Type of Red Men Discovered by Archaeologist.

CRIME IS UNKNOWN TO THEM

Strange People of the North Who Dress in Feathers Found by Dr. George B. Gordon of University of Pennsylvania. Patriarchal Priests Govern Them.

A new tribe of aborigines hitherto unknown to science is reported by Dr. George B. Gordon, curator of the department of American archaeology of the University of Pennsylvania, who recently returned to Philadelphia after a dive into the Alaskan wilderness, says the New York Evening Sun.

The tribe was discovered 800 miles from the mouth of the Kuskokwim river, and Dr. Gordon has named them "Kuskwagmutes." Instead of wearing furs the people dress in the skins of birds, making clothing from the breast feathers of loons. The explorer brought home a collection of their clothing and utensils.

When the collection arrives at Philadelphia he and other ethnologists will try to determine whether the tribe came from Asia or whether it migrated from Lower California. Dr. Gordon believes the race has been gradually driven by Athabaskan Indians and Eskimos to its present quarters, which is a natural fortress. They represent perhaps the most ancient dwellers of Alaska, who made their way there from Asia. They are monogamists, and no such thing as vice is known among them. They are permitted by their priests to have more than one wife, but never do so. The men are tall and strong physically and the women graceful and good looking. Dr. Gordon says there are only 400 of them left.

The members of the tribe show a higher mentality and development than any of the known inhabitants of the far north. They alone of all the tribes north of Mexico and southern California possess the art of pottery making and are believed to be the last of the undiscovered races on this continent to be brought to light. Dr. Gordon heard of them when he was in Alaska in 1905 and determined to find them, although it necessitated his penetrating an unknown Alaskan wilderness.

Dr. Gordon lived for several months with these strange people of the Kuskokwim to study their language, religion and habits. He found them remarkably free from crime and with no set laws, being governed by priests who are patriarchs. The exploring expedition was fitted out by Mrs. Charles C. Harrison of Philadelphia and set out last spring.

As a companion for the journey he engaged a guide. They took steamer as far as Fairbanks, the largest mining camp in the Alaskan interior. At Fairbanks they built a canoe and made their way in it to the mouth of the Kantishna river, a hitherto uncharted and unnamed river emptying into the Tanana fifty miles below Fairbanks.

Although this river is as large as the Delaware at Philadelphia the geography of the northwest is on so tremendous a scale, says Dr. Gordon, that hitherto it has been ignored as an insignificant creek. Dr. Gordon resolved to go up it as far as possible and trust fortune as to his finding a portage from its head to the Kuskokwim.

He camped one night near the mouth of this stream in an Indian village. One of the young men declared that he had crossed the divide between the two streams and volunteered to make a map of the portage for the doctor's guidance. Accordingly the youth drew on birch bark a map of a route up the Kantishna to its source, the hitherto unknown lake, Muntuana, within fifty miles of Mount McKinley, the tallest peak in North America, and across by an easy portage of ten miles to the Kuskokwim, whose course he outlined for a considerable distance both ways.

The canoe was forced up the river, which ran so swiftly that it was necessary constantly to resort to the tump line—a line attached to the forehead of one of the travelers, who walks in the stream and pulls the canoe while the other steers. After 250 miles of this heartbreaking work Dr. Gordon came to Lake Muntuana, nestling at the foot of Mount McKinley, and found the "easy" ten mile portage. It took him six days to traverse the ten miles. Once across, for two solid months the party paddled down the Kuskokwim, making geographical and ethnographic researches as they went.

On his return journey from the mouth of the Kuskokwim river to Nome, a distance of over 100 miles, Dr. Gordon nearly died of starvation and thirst. He was compelled to hazard the stormy trip in a twenty foot trading skiff. On the first day out a storm arose, and the skiff was driven across Bering sea to the Siberian coast. For twenty days the doctor and his companions were buffeted by the sea in the neighborhood of Bering strait. On short rations from the first, after the first five days there was nothing to eat but hardtack biscuit. Near the end of the voyage water gave out, and only the sighting of Siberia, where the water craft was filled from a stream, saved the party from the horrors of thirst. At the time of the landing in Siberia the provisions ran out altogether, and as the coast was absolutely barren of life the party was compelled to put to sea again and face the return journey to America absolutely without provisions. Fortunately a fresh easterly breeze took them to Nome in three days, during which they had nothing to eat.

SIGNOR TOSELLI'S STORY OF THE COURTSHIP.

VILLA BEATRICE.

SIGNORA TOSELLI AND HER LITTLE DAUGHTER, PRINCESS MONICA FROM THE EUROPEAN EDITION OF THE NEW YORK HERALD.

Florence, Italy, Nov. 7.—Signor Toselli, husband of Countess Montignoso, formerly the Crown Princess of Savoy, has given some interesting information as to his meeting with his wife and the manner in which their marriage in London was arranged.

Hardly had Signor Toselli and the countess come to be acquainted before a friendship, which rapidly became a closer nature, sprang up between them, and they were not long in deciding their future marriage.

In July, after surmounting many obstacles, the couple left Florence quietly in an automobile one day, took the train at a small station, and traveling via Turin and Paris, they succeeded in reaching London without being recognized.

Long legal discussion followed and eventually the marriage was duly performed and later confirmed at the Italian consulate. The newly married couple left London immediately afterward.

A. A. STASEL GIVES HISTORY AS RECEIVER

OF SAVINGS BANK AND SETTLEMENT WITH LINGAFELTER'S BONDSMEN.

Announcing That He Will Soon be Able to Pay Creditors Another Dividend.

In the Court of Common Pleas, Wednesday, Albert A. Stasel, receiver of the Newark Savings Bank Company, recovered a judgment against James F. Lingafelter et al in case No. 12183, for the sum of $35,000. This judgment was entered by consent of all parties to this action. It will be remembered that Mr. Lingafelter as cashier of the Newark Savings Bank Company, when he entered upon the duties in that bank, gave a bond in the sum of $50,000. After the receiver took charge of the bank, when it closed its doors on May 20, 1904, this bond was discovered and shortly thereafter suit was brought upon the bond against all the sureties for the sum of $50,000, which the receiver claimed was due and owing to the bank by reason of the overdrafts made by Mr. Lingafelter, upon the bank funds and the various transactions of Lingafelter, whereby he used the bank funds in a large amount. After the case had been pending for some time, overtures were made for a compromise of the case in a sum satisfactory to both parties, and after the examination of the items of evidence and the condition of Mr. Lingafelter's accounts by all the parties, Mr. Stasel, receiver, proposed to the bondsmen, through their attorneys, that he would compromise the action for the sum of $35,000 cash. This proposition has been finally accepted, the money having all been paid in the hands of their attorneys by the bondsmen and judgment was accordingly entered Wednesday morning in that suit.

The compromise of this case and the payment of that sum of money, the receiver now states, will enable him to make a dividend to the creditors of a very substantial amount, which no doubt, will be acceptable to all just at this time. Mr. Stasel proposes to make a dividend of 40 per cent upon all outstanding claims, but it is explained that this 40 per cent, will not, together with the former dividend of 40 per cent, aggregate 80 per cent upon the claims. On the 20th of November, 1904, a dividend of 40 per cent was paid to all creditors. The balance due upon all the claims, after the payment of that dividend, has been bearing interest at 6 per cent, and the balance due upon the claims, together with this interest, is now receiving a dividend of 40 per cent. This will make a total dividend upon the face of the claims in the bank about 70 per cent, because the three years' interest very largely increased the face value of all the claims against the bank. It is understood that this dividend will be paid within the coming month, or at least by the 1st of December, when everything will be ready to pay out this dividend. Mr. Stasel, the receiver, says that this is not the last dividend he will pay. There is still pending in the Court of Common Pleas, a suit against the directors of this bank to require them to pay the amount of illegal loans and the loss to the bank on account of illegal transactions, from which suit he expects to recover a considerable sum of money. There is also remaining the money in the United States court in the bankruptcy proceedings of Mr. Lingafelter, together with a small amount of money reserved by the receiver for future contingencies. When these matters are all paid up it will enable the receiver to make an additional dividend the amount of which, of course, is uncertain. The receiver of the bank says that he regards the compromise of the bond suits as very fortunate, owing to the uncertainty of litigations and the great time it takes for a suit to get through all the courts and an immediate dividend to the creditors of the bank is much more desirable than possibly one a little larger which would not come for a number of years, if the case went through the courts.

SEVENTY-FIFTH

BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATED BY SQUIRE MALONE AT GRANVILLE.

Students After Petty Thieves Who Steal from Cleveland Hall. College News.

Granville, O., Nov. 5.—Once again the home of Mr. J. C. Malone, one of Granville's oldest and most highly respected citizens, was the scene of merry making, when on Tuesday, November 5, Mr. Malone celebrated his 75th birthday anniversary. Weeks ago, Mr. Malone's good wife determined that the event should be properly celebrated and to that end invited a number of his most intimate friends to assist in doing it. The time was most pleasantly spent. The principal event was the dinner, all gathering around the festal board which was filled to overflowing with everything that would tempt the palate. After dinner the elders all talked of the good old times of long ago for a season. All left for their various homes, feeling years younger in body and spirit after the good time they had. Although it was distinctly understood that no presents were to be given, yet Mr. Malone received a number that he prizes very highly. That Mr. Malone may have many more birthday anniversaries is the wish of all his friends.

Recently several of the combination locks have been stolen from the combination lockers in Cleveland Hall. The thief is one of small caliber and the carrying away of the locks is looked upon as a most contemptible act. The building and equipment was donated to the students of the university, and for any one of them to remove a part of it for his own personal use is an act to be deplored, and such a scoundrel should be ferreted out by the student body and be made an example of. The locks will be of no use to anyone, as a sharp lookout will be kept for them.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Owens of Youngstown, who have been here for the past two weeks, returned home Wednesday night.

Miss Carrie Evans of Toledo, made a short visit with Granville friends Wednesday.

Quite a number of the Shepardson girls have been attending the Y. W. C. A. convention at Cincinnati during the past week. Mr. Eugene A. Meade, '87, of Elgin, Ill., has been here for some days visiting his alma mater. He is accompanied by his young son, Maurice. Miss Minnie Jones entertained on Tuesday evening, Josephine Carver, Mildred Shaw, Ruth Watkins and Leila Moore, chaperoned by Miss Parsons.

Physical examinations are now being conducted for the regular class work which will begin directly after Thanksgiving vacation. All academy and college students are required to take this work during their first and second years.

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Moore of Defiance, O., who have been visiting relatives and friends here during the past week, left for Columbus Thursday, where they will visit their daughter Mrs. H. R. Richards, for a short time.

Thomas Langley, a prominent farmer of Delaware county, who has been visiting relatives just north of town for several days, returned to his home Thursday.

Mrs. Edwin N. Little of Norwalk, has been here during the past week, visiting her son, Robert. Rev. Thomas J. Sheppard of this place, class of '70, has presented to the university library an interesting group of old time photographs, which have been handsomely framed and now add to the attractions of Doane Hall. The pictures are the six members of the Denison faculty in 1870: President Talbot and Professors F. O. Marsh, John Stevens, W. A. Stevens, A. U. Thresher and L. E. Hicks. Also a photograph of the college campus as it appeared 37 years ago.

Mrs. Charles L. Seasholes and son, Charles L. Jr., are visiting in Medina, O. Mrs. Seasholes was formerly Miss Grace Lyon of the class of '89. They will shortly make a visit with friends in Granville.

The chicken supper given by the men of the Presbyterian church on Tuesday evening was one of the most successful affairs of the kind ever given in the village, both from a social and financial point of view. There was a large attendance and the tables were constantly thronged during all the evening. The men did all the work in connection with the affair, even to waiting on the tables and washing the dishes. It is found that $104.27 in clear money had been realized from the supper. Pretty good for the men.

O. P. MEETING IS BEING HELD IN CLEVELAND TODAY

President A. A. Stasel of the Newark Baseball Company, left Wednesday night for Cleveland to attend the annual meeting of the O. and P. league which will be held at the Hollenden hotel today. There will be a number of important matters to consider and a very lively meeting is looked for.

President Stasel will endeavor to have each team represented on the executive board instead of only five as is in vogue at present. This would make it better for all concerned and six members could then listen to grievances of any two opposing clubs. It is said that Akron and Youngstown will make a hard fight to have the league redistricted but it is hardly probable that any thing will be done along that line although the clubs at the Southern end of the circuit would not shed any tears to see them go for they are both bad ball towns in point of attendance. The contested games will be settled and President Morton may give out the official averages but no announcement has been made to that effect.

The election of officers will occur and it is probable that Morton will be re-elected. Youngstown will also be awarded the pennant.

Manager Robert Berryhill, who is spending the winter at his home in Lebanon, Ind., may attend the meeting although no word has been received from him to that effect.

MAY HAVE BASKETBALL DURING COMING SEASON

Lovers of basket ball will be pleased to learn that Newark will probably have a team this season, arrangements now being perfected to that end.

Prof. A. O. Ludwig, physical instructor of the Y. M. C. A., is casting about for good players and would like to hear from five or six who mean business and would like to get into the game. Only first class men will be considered and no others need apply. As soon as they are secured Mr. Ludwig will put them in training and coach them for the schedule which will be arranged.

Despite its many handicaps and disadvantages, basket ball may be said to have safely weathered its probationary stage and to have secured a fairly high standing in the popular estimation. In no case is this better illustrated than in the attitude of the public press toward the sport at present, as contrasted to its attitude of five years ago. Amateur basket ball has a tendency to develop a spirit of high-class sportmanship and we sincerely trust that Mr. Ludwig will be given that encouragement which his efforts merits.

JUST WHAT NEW YORK'S CLEARING HOUSE DOES AND HOW IT WAS ESTABLISHED.

Skilled Association That Has Been Made the Center of Country's Financial System Through Vast Transactions of Modern Business—Simple Expedient That Solves the Problem For Individual Banks of Keeping Enough Cash on Hand to Meet Daily Needs.

TO the average followers of affairs financial the name of the New York clearing house is associated primarily with the weekly bank statement on which brokers sell or buy the market, as suits their disposition, and an annual statement of clearings, balances and exchanges running into wholly impossible figures that are only useful for one who is preparing an address upon the commercial greatness of the country. To the average outsider still less is suggested by mention of the New York clearing house unless perhaps there remains a memory of some early study of banks and their relationship to each other, says the New York Times.

Go down past the clearing house building in Cedar street, between Broadway and Nassau, and there is no sign of great things happening near by. A doorway leading into a marble-walled foyer, where sits an ancient guard reading a newspaper; then a winding succession of stairs—more than one stairway and hardly two—and one comes into an upper corridor and meets another guard, also at his ease.

Inside are two private offices that might serve any large private banking wise, and organizations of business men in many quarters give their thanks to the New York clearing house for its services in the interest of sound banking and proper business methods. It is easily a circumstance that merits a bit of study as to how it came about.

Suppose one goes back, just for a moment, to the beginning, before there was any clearing house at all. It was long enough ago to be in the days when the hoarding of one's wealth in a stocking was not a matter for extraordinary comment. Diverse systems of banking carrying diverse consequences to the depositor had afflicted the country, and there were not a few who had but little use for banks anyhow and chose to keep their funds at home, where they could be always obtainable. These chary ones, then, wanted to have their assets in a thoroughly "liquid" state. To do that they took the chances of fire and robbers and rats, kept their deposits in their closets and made their clearances over their own hearthstones.

It was a system that had certain advantages, but was not without its drawbacks. If one leaves out of consideration the element of safety in the stocking bank there is still an objection of inconvenience when it comes person to whom the debt was due. So the banks, with their steel and concrete vaults for their cupboards, kept their funds in their stockpiles and made their clearances over their own counters, sending forth their messengers in person with cash to pay those who owed and would not come to collect.

Hence the establishment of the clearing house. Here was a community knitted more and more closely together every year by the strengthening of common business interest, becoming more and more a center for the exchange of the country's business, where the weekly clearings ran into the billions of dollars and the weekly exchanges of credits into the hundreds of millions. For each bank to keep on hand all the cash needed to care for all the demands of depositors every day meant that practically all the assets representing active accounts must be available at an instant's notice.

Element of Danger.

There was an element of waste and an element of danger in such a situation as this. The element of danger was that the banks, obliged to keep so large an amount of cash on hand, would have shut down on their customers whenever there was the slightest contraction of money, lest they find themselves unable to make good. The element of waste lay in the limitations placed upon the investments which the banks might safely and profitably make of the funds in their charge if only their actual cash outlay could be figured on the net instead of on the gross basis. The clearing house was the result.

And with the clearing house came mutual confidence based upon information. The member banks, first disclosing to each other their debts and credits every day, later recognized the wisdom of making a weekly confession of condition. Side by side was maintained the right of the clearing house to go in and make an examination at any time of a member bank, for the clearing house undertook to take from each bank belonging to it a statement of its claims against every other member bank, to balance those statements, collect the balances from the debit banks and turn the credits over to the banks entitled to receive them.

Good Work Done in 1893.

It was back in 1893 when the clearing house last demonstrated that it was an instrument of safety as well as of convenience. In the memory of recent things one needs not hark back to the money stringency of that time for illustration of what such a condition means to the banks. In 1893 the people had to withdraw their money from the banks not because they distrusted the banks themselves or the methods by which they were conducted, but because the money was needed to pay for the necessities of business and personal life. There came a time when there was not cash enough in actual circulation to go around among the banks if withdrawals were to continue, and the prospect was for a suspension of payments not because of insolvency based on inability to pay debts in liquidation, but inability to convert good assets into cash quickly enough to keep up with the demands of depositors.

The plan that was adopted has become historic. In the office of William Sherer, the present manager of the clearing house, there hangs a picture of a group of gentlemen gathered around a big board room table. At the head of the table is H. W. Cannon, then president of the Chase National bank, and around him are T. D. Tappan, who was president of the Gallatin National; G. G. Williams, then president of the Chemical National; William A. Nash, president of the Corn Exchange National, and J. Edward Simmons, president of the Fourth National, who are still at the head of those institutions, and E. H. Perkins, who was at the head of the Importers and Traders'. With them were Mr. Sherer and W. J. Gilpin, assistant manager of the clearing house.

Eliminates Cash Exchanges.

The committee became known as the clearing house loan committee. Its procedure was to eliminate entirely the exchange of cash between the banks in settling their balances with each other by means of a system of clearing house loans and credits. Thus if a bank had a debit balance of $250,000 it would be required to put up approved collateral with the clearing house backing a loan to it in this amount. If a bank, on the other hand, had a credit balance it would receive a certificate from the clearing house in this amount having the pledge of the associated banks behind it.

By this method it became possible for the banks to use all their funds for their over the counter business without having to employ any part of their cash to settle their balances in the clearing house. The degree of the emergency may be judged from the fact that currency sold at a premium of 4 per cent, and the banks without concern for possible receivership applications refused to pay out cash on their checks presented in any large amounts until the depositors could satisfy them that the money was needed for legitimate purposes.

The panic of 1893 passed by and there were no bank failures in the clearing house circle. The names of the men who were on the loan committee of that year went down into history as having performed a great public service that was to stand unimpaired until the crisis of October, 1907, was reached.

The clearing house committee of 1907 will also go down in financial history as having exercised effectively and skillfully the moral suasion which is the chief power of an organization with billions of assets among its members.

AMUSEMENTS

THE WALLS OF JERICHO.

"The Walls of Jericho," which is from the pen of Alfred Suro, has been one of the conspicuous plays of the past two seasons in the United States. It also ran for that same length of time in London. In both countries it won the highest admiration from the people, who are willing to think at the theater, and rememstandards of life and conduct are not those of the world into which he has married. His wife goes very nearly the length and breadth of that world. At last Frohisher intervenes, and husband and wife face each other in a scene that is genuinely dramatic. In the end Frohisher persuades her to go with him to Queensland.

ber that which they have seen when they leave it.

"The Walls of Jericho" is a solid, serious, purposeful modern drama of ideas. It is one of the greatest society plays of recent years for it is rooted in life itself and proves its author a figure in the front rank of English dramatists and of the first group of living English literati.

The play pictures the "smart set" of the West End of London that frequents the house of the Marquis of Steventon, chronically in need of money and ready to obtain it by almost any means. His daughter, the Lady Alethea, has married Jack Frohisher of Queensland, who has returned rich to England. Frohisher's

THE DARLING OF THE GODS.

David Belasco's very unusual but highly successful drama, "The Darling of the Gods," was presented at the Auditorium Wednesday night to a very satisfactory and highly appreciative audience. The play, well known to the people informed on the better class of the productions of recent years, were fully alive to the stirring situation, the correctness in every detail of lines and costumes, and demonstrated their approval in derisive terms of the clever work of Miss Christine Norman the "Yo-San" of this production and the capable company.

The cast was unusually good and were fully alive to the difficult parts they portrayed. The play is education in itself and pictures in a way that everyone can understand, the life, traditions and customs of the land of Nippon; the land of the Midnight Sun. The action of the play takes place in Japan, centuries ago, when the emperor, by edict, took away the swords of the Samurai—the two sword men. Some of the warriors refused to bow to the wishes of their master, were outlawed and took to the forests of the hills, deriving to the last the despot that ruled them.

Miss Norman as a successor to Miss Blanche Bates in the part of the "The Darling of the Gods," is a credit to Mr. Belasco's discrimination. Throughout her difficult role she is womanly and shows that in the far away land of the Mikado, even in this early day, they loved and hated as we do now. Among the very excellent support given the star, the work of Percy Spiro, as Kara the outlawed prince; Westrop Saunders as Zokhari, the minister of war, and Frank Lanning as Kato, was especially noticeable.

WILTON LACKAYE COMING.
The coming of Wilton Lackaye on Thursday, November 14, to Newark offers an exceptional opportunity to see this popular actor in an assured success. Mr. Lackaye will be seen as "Jason," in Hall Calne's greatest success, "The Bondman." This play has been running for 12 months at the Drury Lane theater, London, and is one of the greatest sensations in the country for the past decade. Wm. A. Brady, manager of Mr. Lackaye, has imported into America all the Drury Lane scenery and effects and the production is one of the most elaborate ever seen. Six scenes are used, three depicting life in the Isle of Man, and the others that of Sicily. The convict sulphur mines scenes are said to be marvels of realism. A company of 60 people will support Mr. Lackaye and included in the cast are many prominent and well known players.

MISS HALL, A SECOND LOTTA.

There is hardly a theater goer of Newark, of the past or present generation who does not remember "Lotta." To be compared with her is an exceptionally high compliment while to be called "the second Lotta" is a distinction hardly to be dreamed of by the most aspiring actress of the present day. Such, however, has been the happy lot of Miss Jessie Mae Hall who this season is appearing in a new musical comedy drama, "The Cutest Girl in Town." No less than a dozen critics who have seen her work in this piece have compared her with the famous "Lotta" and several of them have given her this title. In fact, the star and play have met with such success during the present tour that every manager along the route has asked for a return engagement this season and it is the intention of the manager if possible to comply with this request. Miss Hall will appear at the Auditorium theater, and our readers will have an opportunity of seeing this new production.

A GREAT VIOLINIST.

Francis Macmillen, the American violinist, seems to have startled all London during the present social season by his marvelous dexterity with the bow and fiddle. In addition he created a sensation by playing in a darkened hall, the only light in the house being focussed on the player as he stood on the stage. The English critics, almost to a man, applauded the plan, declaring that it added much to the enjoyment of the concert in that the attention of the entire audience was for the whole time riveted on the artist. Mr. Macmillen laugh is not excelled by that of anyone and is equalled in but very few instances will play his annual engagement at the Southern theater, Columbus, on Monday and Tuesday, November 11 and 12. He offers this season "The Tattooed Man," a new musical comedy which is said to confer upon him far more than the usual number of opportunities for the display of his individual manner of making fun, which is always the most effective. Those who have seen Mr. Daniels' performances heretofore, know that he is never so funny as when he is impersonating some potentate.

"The Gingerbread Man," which comes to the Southern on Friday and Saturday, November 15 and 16, is a fairy spectacle and musical extravaganza well worth seeing. The scenes of the story are laid in Fairyland. The chorus sings a soft, melodious refrain.

A NEWARK CASE.

Many More Like It In Newark.
The following case is but one of many similar occurring daily in Newark. It is an easy matter to verify its correctness. Surely you can not ask for better proof than such conclusive evidence.

C. L. Starr, harnessmaker, of 89 Hancock St., Newark, O., says: "My confidence in Doan's Kidney Pills as a kidney and backache remedy is unbounded. In recommending this preparation I speak from experience. For years I was a sufferer from kidney complaint and backache and could get no relief. I had a miserable aching pain in the loins and my back was lame and weak. It was just as bad night or day and when I attempted to stoop or pick up anything a pain would strike me in the back that almost made me fall. I remained in one position for any length of time and then moved quickly the pain stabbed me like the thrust of a knife. I suffered in this way for years, and all the remedies that I tried failed to help me. I was just as bad as ever when I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Crayton's drug store, and you may believe that I was delighted when the first few doses brought me relief. In less than forty-eight hours the backache was gone and I continued the treatment until entirely free from my old trouble. My wife used Doan's Kidney Pills and they did the same for her, and neither of us have had any return of kidney trouble since using them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

NO LOOP

But "Fearnaught" Wilson of Coshocton Will Attempt to "Loop the Loop" Without It.

"Fearnaught" Wilson, who, with Al Donaldson of this city, invented the Coshocton ship has a new stunt, says the Coshocton Age-Times. It is a loop the loop as a bicycle—without a loop.

In other words, he will dash down a steep incline on his wheel. The incline will be so adjusted that as his wheel shoots off into space it will give him a whirl, making a complete back somersault in the air, man, wheel and all, and then light on a continuation of the track and sail ahead. Wilson figures these stunts in mathematical precision and has it all down exactly on paper, angles, velocity, etc., before he ever attempts on a wheel. He has the plans all ready, and will have a model made this month and the practice it. He is certain of his success.

FIND NO CLUE TO MURDER OF JOSEPH SPANGLER

Though the county officials and the city police department have worked with untiring energy on the mysterious Spangler murder case, and every possible clue has been thoroughly investigated, absolutely no evidence has been secured and the identity of the assassin is not known. With the investigation of the man thought to know something about it, and who was given a thorough sweat-out by the third degree, all hopes of the officers vanished. They are keeping doggedly at it, however, and may be rewarded by striking information from some unexpected source.

A report was circulated Monday that Mr. E. H. Davis, on whose farm Spangler lived, located quite a sum of money buried by Spangler, who told him some time ago when he had secreted it, and if any harm ever came to him, to dig it up. The advocate phoned to residents of this locality, but no one had heard the report and knew nothing about the finding of any money by Mr. Davis.

Remember This Recipe For Cold and Cough Cure

Simple as it is, there is nothing better for colds and stubborn coughs. Tastes pleasant, too, and can be made at home at small cost.

Granulated Sugar Syrup, 1 1/2 oz.
Pinex ..... 2 1/2 oz.

The 2 1/2 oz. of Pinex will cost you 50 cents in any drug store. Put the Pinex in a pint bottle, then fill it up with the Granulated Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours, as required. The pint is enough to last a family a long time. Well corked, it keeps indefinitely.

Pinex is the most concentrated form of Norway white pine extract. It is rich in all the elements that have made the Norwegian pine forests famous in curing consumption and other membrane diseases.

In making up this prescription, do not use ground nutmeg, unless you use Pinex. It may be that some druggists do not have it, but they can get it for you if you request to do so.

day afternoon, being the case of Lillie Bounds against Ross Bounds. The plaintiff sues for a decree on the grounds of abandonment and failure to provide, and in connection with the suit there is an interesting history.

On September 13, 1906, James Gary called at the Probate Judge's office and secured a license for the marriage of Ross Bounds, a railroad section man, aged 28 years, and Miss Lillian McClain, daughter of Arthur McClain of Kinkersville. The ceremony was performed at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. James Gary, near Moore's Corners, on the Columbus, Buckeye Lake and Newark Traction line by the Rev.
T. N. Madden of Hebron, in the presence of about forty guests, and an elaborate wedding feast had been provided. It was on a Sunday afternoon that the marriage was performed and Mr. Bounds left Newark at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and at 8 o'clock that same evening entered his mother's home in Newark and declared to her that he had been married against his wish and that he wanted nothing whatever to do with his bride. It is claimed that young Bounds was not strong mentally and that he was virtually forced into the marriage against his will. Bounds claims that on the day of the wedding he received a message saying that he was wanted at the Gary home. He says that when he arrived at the house he was amazed to learn that all was in readiness for the marriage, the preacher and guests being there and the wedding feast spread. Not desiring to disappoint the girl and the guests he rather reluctantly went through the ceremony, and shortly after dinner was served he declared his intention of returning to his mother, which he did, leaving the much surprised bride behind. It is claimed that Bounds from the day of his marriage up to the present time, has never lived with his wife.
The case was continued until December 9 at 9 o'clock.

For Stealing Cigars.
On affidavit of Otis Kaufman, made before Justice M. O. Nash, a warrant was issued for W. D. Gilbert, and placed in the hands of Constable Darnes for service. Gilbert was charged with taking and carrying away on the 14th of January, 1907, cigars of the value of $1, belonging to James Krieder, of the West End.
Gilbert is the man who caused the arrest of Alex Dollis on the charge of attempting to illegally register in Precinct C, of the Third ward, and which case has already partly been heard in Justice Nash's court. The indications are that it will be dropped as thus far the state has made no case. Gilbert entered a plea of guilty to the charge and was fined $1 and the costs.

three meals. But one day Tommy Jr., took Pinchtown by surprise, and ever since that day his neighbors laud him to the skies. For with Aurora Paint white, to a lovely shade of emerald and he'd done it in a night. Aurora Paints are made in all colors and are
